

Just in front of the table was a larger square, made of white marble and embossed with a parabolic design of silver stars.

Clary stepped into the center of the white square as if she were stepping in front of a firing squad. She raised her head. “All right,” she said. “Now what?”